

Contents

Acknowledgments	v
Chapter 1 Introduction	1
1.1. Aim and Scope	1
1.2. Organization	5
Chapter 2 The General Architecture of Competition Theory	9
2.1. Introduction	9
2.2. Competition Theory in the Representational Modularity Model	10
2.3. The Basic Framework of Competition Theory	14
2.3.1. Mechanism of Morphology-Syntax Competition	14
2.3.2. Language Types: Morphology-Preferring and Syntax-Preferring Languages	17
2.4. Competition-Theoretic View of Compounding and its Consequences ...	18
2.4.1. English ‘Root Compounds’ as Lexicalized Phrases	18
2.4.2. Structural Analysis of Synthetic Compounds	20
2.5. Main Claim: Clustering Effects of a Single Macroparameter	23
2.6. Theoretical Background: Approach Based on Optimality Theory ...	26

2.7. Summary	31
Chapter 3 Realization Patterns of Nominal Modification in English and Japanese	33
3.1. Introduction	33
3.2. Baker (2003a, b): Cross-Linguistic Variations in Attested Types of Nominal Modification	35
3.2.1. Two Types of Nominal Modification: Direct and Indirect Modification	35
3.2.2. Direct Modification as an Adjectival Property	37
3.3. Competition-Theoretic Analysis of Direct Modification	39
3.3.1. Japanese A-N Compounds as Morphologically-Realized Forms of Direct Modification	39
3.3.2. Diversity of Nominal Modifications in Germanic Languages	46
3.4. Competition-Theoretic Predictions in Non-competing Circumstances	49
3.4.1. Morphologically-Realized Forms in English	49
3.4.2. Syntactically-Realized Forms in Japanese	50
3.5. Summary	55
Chapter 4 Further Applications	57
4.1. Introduction	57
4.2. Phrasal Realization vs. Compound Realization	58
4.2.1. VPs vs. V-V Compounds	58
4.2.2. Coordinated Structure	71
4.3. Free Forms vs. Bound Forms: Realization Patterns of Discourse Markers	82
4.4. Conflation vs. Incorporation	92
4.4.1. The Distinction between Conflating and Incorporating Languages	93
4.4.2. Competition-Theoretic Analysis of Conflation and Incorporation	97
4.4.3. Simplex Forms vs. Complex Forms	102
4.5. Summary	115
Chapter 5 Conclusion	117

Appendix Lexicalization Analysis of English ‘Root Compounds’ and Related Issues	123
1. Introduction	123
2. The Definition of Lexicalization and Compounding: Their Fundamental Difference	124
3. Lexicalization Analysis of English ‘Root Compounds’	127
3.1. Non-uniformity of N-N and A-N ‘Root Compounds’	127
3.2. Other Cases of Lexicalized Phrases	132
4. Verbal N-N Combinations as Attributive Phrases	137
5. Lexicalization as a Language-Neutral Process and Cross-Linguistic Variations	142
6. Summary	144
References	147
Index	163